

Sports Shirts framing

Pelican Picture Framing is well known for the quality of their sports shirt framing and attracts customers from a wide geographical area. They have completed framing for individual customers but also for schools, sports clubs and charity auctions. They always have at least a couple of examples available in the shop to help customers understand what the finished product will look like.

Sports shirt framing can be done well or else extremely badly and Pelican framers are always keen to ensure that items framed are completed in a way that preserves the shirt in its original condition, does not cause any damage and if it has been bought as an investment does not reduce it's value due to the use of inappropriate products or techniques.

The frame can contain just the shirt but it should be kept away from the glass with a mount to reduce the possibility of water vapour or condensation damaging the material. Ideally the use of conservation glass is recommended to reduce colour fading and to help preserve any signatures that might be on the object. The shirt is sewn to the mount and is not glued or stapled because the goal is that anything done is fully reversible.

Other objects can also be included in a frame with a sports shirt and frames have been completed to include cricket bats, booklets, photographs, VIP passes just to name a few examples.

An example where we have included a booklet autographed by the player who wore the shirt can be seen here. The mount was designed and cut especially to incorporate it.

When customers bring in signed shirts they are often covered in a teams signatures and this therefore makes for a large frame, particularly when an extra-large shirt has been signed. If a shirt only has a single signature then it can be folded to produce a smaller frame.

Framing a sports shirt properly is a job for someone who has been trained to look after your property and to make sure it is not damaged or devalued. It's a job for someone who can make sure that it will enhance your home or office for years to come.

Pelican Picture Framing are members of the Fine Art Trade Guild. Their framers have all received professional training and the staff includes two Fine Art Trade Guild Commended Framers.
